Hospital Time EP

As if having to prove himself the toughest kid on the block, Stephen Peter's Hospital Time EP, shows him in the aftermath of a car accident; not recoiling and looking for pity from Ma', but instead tinkering around with his cotton candy loops, finding the answers to why we hurt. A trip down the boardwalk, Peters is taking it all in; the grizzled balloon vendors, the school of seagulls perched on the aging awning, his peers throwing their allowance at rigged carnival games. A buoyant follow up to last years "Stephen is Here and Not Here", "Hospital Time" is a daydream on loop, wondering WHY we are here and NOT there. Stephen dreams of these greener pastures on "Team 7-Eleven", "hey this party's lame/ i think i know a place/ in those winding aisles/ sure can conjure a smile/ now i am feeling good/ this lighting improves my mood". Those greener pastures may be a 7 Eleven or a serene beach where SP is hoping to "catch a big one" on final track "Surfingggg". Because, when you are lying in a hospital bed, nodding in and out of consciousness, all one can truly dream of is stretching out, toes dipped in that ocean blue, and feeling small amidst the expansiveness of it all.

Playoff EP

available in:
CS/DIG

tracklist:

1. Hospital Time
2. Team 7-Eleven
3. Brother
4. Carolina
5. Shammgod
6. Surfingggg

"a loopy (and looped) vocoder romp that settles somewhere between dreamwave and polished DIY electronica. The lyrics are drippingly wry and settle high in the mix, it is easy to get lost in the sound of "TV & Donuts", which will help you forget the downfall of civilization."

Impose Magazine

"dreary and pitched like tired, cartoonish depictions of should and shouldn't, deals with a "you need this" "I want that" conflict that pops up while window shopping — at the mall or on your screen"
